

February 2017

I am writing this letter of recommendation for Eric Lee, whom I have known as my mentor for this past year. I met Eric through the British Columbia Institute of Technology's (BCIT) Mentorship Program. We had meetings twice a month, by either phone or in-person.

Eric has truly been a caring and supportive mentor. I presented the areas in which I wished to grow, and we worked through them throughout our meetings. He asked me questions, guiding me to an understanding of the challenges and possible solutions. Every meeting, he asked me about the progress I had made towards my goals and gave me encouragement, guidance, and continual support.

Eric was also open to my questions about human psychology, emotion, and its relationship to business, architecture, and myself. I would not have explored these concepts at school, and I am grateful for Eric's generosity in sharing his wisdom.

Eric has helped me develop confidence, discipline, and focus through creating habits and working towards goals, like my Infinity Goal. I understand myself better than I did before, and I have a better picture of what I want my future to look like.

I sincerely recommend Eric to anyone seeking mentorship in developing their career, character, and any other aspects of life. His experience and wisdom has inspired me and I believe it will too for many others.
